

Which
innovation in food
is in your sight?

Open innovation?

Exploring new ingredients?

Searching for new technologies?

Focusing on health benefits?

First and foremost, innovation is about

people

who work together in defined

projects

across organizational boundaries to develop

solutions

that matter to their business and the end consumer.

Managing projects within an innovation network across organizational boundaries is not an easy task, but it is critical to success.

An external consultant can bridge gaps among innovation partners that differ in size, culture, structure, and expectations.

My offer:

- To help you design and manage comprehensive innovation projects with external partners across organizational borders
- To add own expertise in product development, combined with food technology, ingredients and flavours know-how to develop innovative solutions
- To bring in technology and innovation partners from industry and research
